Ten-year-old twins Maddie and Mia and their younger sister, Lulu, travel with their dad and famous mom, Gloria Glimmer, to London, where Gloria is putting on a few concerts. During their stay, they get to see the sights, including the National Gallery, to which Maddie is drawn due to her quieter, artistic bent. While there, Maddie and Mia see what they believe is the theft of a Renoir painting. When no one believes them, Maddie sneaks out of the hotel one afternoon to catch the thief.

Blending travelogue, mystery, and family story, this novel from Christian recording artist Grant has pedantic overtones, particularly in the interactions between Maddie and her mom, that may turn off some readers. Still, the story will find a home with many conservative Christians and fans of Grant's music. First in the Glimmer Girls series, this light mystery gets some added sparkle as the book's adults encourage Maddie to find her own "glimmer." ---

Cute, entertaining book for my 2nd grade daughter. Always looking for fun, wholesome reading material for her. No bratty or defiant characters!

Bought this for my 8 year old niece. She loves art so I thought she would dig it but it didn't hold her interest. She's been really into graphic novels lately so we're trying to cycle in the traditional chapter books.

My 9 year old niece LOVES this book and can't wait to finish it so I can order the next in the series :)

Thanks

"Amazing book, love the series." Says 9 year old girl

My daughter loved this book. She read it the first two days she had it. The story line is easy to follow and shares a great message. Cute, yet entertaining. Highly recommend.

It was a Christian novel. It was about an artist. It was awesome. It wasn't too good to be true

Girls will love
