Paint By Sticker: Create 12 Masterpieces One Sticker At A Time!

Synopsis

Introducing a compelling new activity for crafters and artists, doodlers and coloring book enthusiasts of all ages. Paint by Sticker includes everything you need to create twelve vibrant, full-color "paintings." The images—including sunflowers, a fox, a hummingbird in mid-flight, two boats on the water—are rendered in "low-poly," a computer graphics style that creates a 3-D effect. As in paint-by-number, each template is divided into dozens of spaces, each with a number that corresponds to a particular colored sticker. Find the sticker, peel it, and place it in the right space. Add the next, and the next, and the next—it's an activity that's utterly absorbing as you watch a "painting" emerge from a flat black-and-white illustration to a dazzling image with color, body, spirit. The pages are perforated for easy removal, making it simple to frame the completed images. **•

...and you don't mind taking an extra step, use rubber cement or a glue stick. Like other reviews said, the stickers DO NOT STICK. Really at all. I was getting really frustrated on my first one, then had the bright idea to use an adhesive. All I had at the time was a glue stick: Perfection. Even when the glue dried, it was tacky enough to work with the adhesive on the sticker to hold it in place. The next time when I was with all my craft supplies, rubber cement was better (as I assumed it would be for its tacky-ness), I just made sure the layer was thin by using a smaller brush than the one in the lid to control how much I put down and to get into the sharp corners on some designs. (Obviously I do this step on the entire design before starting, not on each section during application of each sticker.) Plus, the beauty of rubber cement is that you can let it dry then cleanly roll off any excess if it got somewhere you don't want it. I don't find having to do this step annoying for any reason other than the fact that the stickers should simply just stick on their own. I hope future versions of this use a better adhesive, but all in all, I'd still consider another adult version of this. One of the tips in the beginning of the book is to lay a sheet of paper over it once completed and run a bone folder (or something firm and flat) over the design, presumably to help the stickers stay in place, so they must know it's an issue. Also, if you're expecting perfection like the photos, you won't get it. The stickers aren't a perfectly precise match to the shape, so you will see some white in between, and then others overlap each other, even with precision application...some shapes just aren't exact matches. My perfectionism and I had a hard time with this at first, but we don't care now. I use cheap tweezers so that helps a lot with small pieces and alignment. I have not tried tearing out one of the design pages yet, but I have to be very careful when tearing the sticker pages from the back because it is a thicker paper and you have to be tough, but the stickers near the edge can rip away when doing this, so just be careful if that's your method.

I'm a big fan of mosaics & coloring so when I saw this book, I knew I had to try it. It's a great book but my complaint is that the stickers don't stick well at all!! I'm having to glue the stickers & while that's okay with me, others may think it's more trouble than it's worth. I'm not sure if I just got a 'bad book' or what but aside from this, I would have given 5 stars because it's a great book.

Very disappointed in this product; the stickers are very difficult to remove from the paper. They seem to be connected to one or more edges, creating a tear when they are pulled--even gently--from their places. The pictures and colors are beautiful, but the transfer process is quite frustrating.

Unique way to "color". I was intrigued by the concept. You have 12 individual one-sided pages, each having a different design on it, and each design broken into different shapes and labeled with a letter and a number, such as A20 or D3. Behind the 12 pages are the pages of stickers, it appears to be 2 per finished page. They are perforated for easy removal. Then you simply find the sticker you need, and place it in place. For the first picture, the two sticker pages are further separated into A, B, C, and D. I am legally blind (20/300 in best eye), and I am able to do this with assistance from my magnifying glass. If you aren't the deadliest, a pair of tweezers may help, too.

It's fun to do once but the stickers are actually really challenging to get exactly on the lines so the results don't end up looking like the samples. But the kids like it, it's fun to hunt for the matching boxes. I was hoping it was going to be meditative like coloring but it's a little more frustrating than that.

These are wonderful books (and there are many to choose from) for the child who likes to sit and have quiet time. Sticker by number requires the child to choose and place stickers to create a picture which are a little harder. Wonderful for small motor skill development and concentration. I would recommend these books.

Absolutely love these! I got mine for Christmas and have given them to each of my two college granddaughters. Their busy schedules don't allow for much leisure time, but they've both tried them during "down times" and find them fun and relaxing. I do, too! Would highly recommend this. I do like it better than the coloring books because you don't need so many "things" around

My five year granddaughter loves these books. This one is harder than Zoo Animals. It's a nice activity to do with her. She will do it on her own but each picture has a lot of small pieces and is numbered with a letter and number (like B21) and not quite in an order so it is harder to find the piece and place it.
