All of my kids have enjoyed Adventures in Odyssey since they were very young. My oldest is now 23, and he still enjoys listening to the stories when he is home. Of the four children still at home, the 20 year old pops these in to listen to them while doing household chores as often as the 12 year old. This collection, specifically, is nice to have as an object lesson/ discussion topic for respect. It has a nice little collection of 3 stories: 1 - Relatively Annoying: A Lesson in: Getting along with people 2 - Subject Yourself: A Lesson in: Obedience 3 - Potlucks and Poetry: A Lesson in: Appreciating your parents. These are very nice for using while working on character traits, as part of a Sunday school or Bible lesson, or just for car trips and entertainment with a message.Highly recommended. (((NOTE: If you have collections some of these may already be on collection sets. That is why I've included the titles of each one. We have some collections that include one or more of these, but still find this is nice to have this little set all in one place.)))

These stories were very good. I felt like I was watching them on the television. All the background sounds were there along with different people doing the voices for the different characters. It is Christian oriented and gives reflection to passages in the bible which is what I was looking for. Definitely plan to purchase more and share with others. Stories were too chort though. I wanted more.

We stopped watching TV because of all the bad influence. My children love the option of the Odyssey series. We can't get enough. I highly recommend all the Odyssey options, they make great gifts and stocking stuffers. I enjoy listening to Odyssey as an adult , with my children. It is a great family pre bedtime activity.

we realy LOVE adventure's in Odyssey ... wish they would publish an age range. The story line was a bit above our 3 year old.

In today's world where media teaches children thier perspective of what is right and wrong, parents need all the help they can get. This is a great series which teaches kids Christian perspective using situations that they actually face. I bought them for my 9 year old son and he is just starting to listen to them. I have purchased several of these and would recommend them to parents!

Our girls just LOVE Adventures in Odyssey! Great character building stories for any age (even adults will love listening to the cd!)

listen to these in the car regularly. Makes trips better and the kids learn solid lessons.

I loved listening to Adventures in Odessey add a child and now I'm excited to introduce my kids to them.
