SECOND BONUS:

There are also interesting quotes from famous golfers to keep the golfer motivated. It's not complicated: Use these 54 tips and you will shoot lower! Excerpt: "Dr. Joan Vickers, Ph.D., a professor in Neuro-motor Psychology, studies how vision controls and modulates motor behavior with professional golfers and social golfers and other sports. In other words, she studied eye-tracking and motion analysis of golfers and looking for differences between low handicappers and high handicappers. "She wanted to find out where pro golfers focused their eyes when hitting and for how long from the taking the club back away from the ball to the finished swing. She studied amateur social golfers as well and compared the results against the pro golfer group. "She used headgear apparatus on the golfers which gave her information on exactly where the golfers focused their eyes before, during and after hitting the ball and for how long their eyes focused on the ball.

"She discovered most all golfers focus their eyes on the back of the ball and not the top of the ball.

The eyes give information to the brain, and the brain relays the information to the muscles telling the muscles what to do. "The pro golfers kept their eyes focus for 2 seconds while amateurs only focused 1.5 seconds. The 0.5 second difference made a substantial difference in ball striking."

DRILL: At the range, hit a bucket of balls and focus on the back end of the ball (rather than the top or center of the ball or the leading edge of the ball) before, during and after hitting the shot. Once your eyes are focused on the back end of the ball, take the club away (stay relaxed and focused) and begin counting "One – two" during your swing, holding your focus for at least 2 seconds. "You will notice a difference in counting to two during your entire swing while keeping your eyes on the back end of the ball." SCROLL UP and get this enjoyable book to begin your journey with only one reference book and shoot lower scores! PRAISES RECEIVED: "An excellent and entertaining golf education book written with a good sense of humor. Helped me get rid of mistakes which hurt my scoring and I score better. Loved it and thank you, Golfwell!" -A.

All of our books make great gifts for golfers. We have a special book for young golfers, "Walk the Winning Ways" designed to help young golfers maintain a good confidence level in golf and in life in general. We are in New Zealand and have traveled around the golfing world. Members of our team have a philosophy of enjoying life and we try not to take things too seriously. We hope our writings will chase your blues away as well as help you learn more about the golfing world. Enjoy!

The drills and the majority of the golf advice will be useful in my golf game. I didn't give it a five because, as a female golfer, I did not appreciate the reference on every page to fat ladies and the occasional sexist joke. There are numerous quotes in the book, but I found that the pro golfer quotes were the most useful in hitting home particular golf tips.

The name of the book will get your attention! We know these things but keep repeating our many mistakes until they are pointed out in this very readable and funny book. A book not only for men. Everyone can see themselves in some of these situations. Hopefully we will learn to slow down a little and remember some of the advice - before hitting the ball!
