Dan Liebman is the author of many books on a wide range of topics, including numerous books for children. A long-time editor of trade and educational books, he is a specialist in plain language for both young and adult readers.

I Want To Be A Chef by Dan Liebman covers information such as the workday of a chef (location 7) and the different kinds of chefs (such as a pastry chef, sous chef etc.). There is also the feature of certain chefs working for their food such as the pizza chef in location 10, the mention of writing a cookbook as a chef, and a recipe for chocolate chip cookies near the end of the kindlebook.

My students loved this! Great series of community helpers/different occupations. It was fun to have them point out different things in the photos that they knew/recognized! Good non-fiction on community helpers for young children.

This is a great book...it is a nice addition to the play kitchen-restaurant theme. It has some really neat vocabulary words that my daycare enjoyed and have used while playing. The real pictures are wonderful as well as the different types of chefs and kitchens.

works well when talking about careers with preschoolers!

Nice
