I love how this is divided into sections so you can see one area at a time on one side and most of the state on the other side (they NEVER make the maps big enough for Texas to fit on one side). It has a nice finish so after your roadtrip, and after marking your route, you can clean it off. You don't have to worry about a huge map that will say forever ruffled, torn, and creased. The map also has good markings as to points of interest.

The map is really small and the detail is difficult to read. I had an earlier version that had less detail and was easier to use.

I bought this on a whim - after all how many ways can you spell Fort Worth or Dallas? Turned out to be a good sized, fold up highway map of Texas that is laminated. I got it to keep in the glove box should my GPS ever stop working. This is similar to the maps that you get at AAA or that used to be for free, many, many years ago, from gas stations. Well worth the $3.18 cost.

This is a standard size folding map. The writing is small because fitting the entire state of Texas on a standard map is crowded, therefore; those who cannot adjust their eyesight to 20/20 should look for a large print map. The map includes all the important information the average traveler is looking for. It does fold easily and neatly down to the specific area where your information is located. I didn't count them but the map includes at least 7, and maybe 8 or more, city maps (DFW, Austin, San Antonio, Waco, and several others). The only downside I can see to the map is the smaller print and this can be adjusted for. (Though, I probably wouldn't try and read this, or any other, map while driving.) Shipping was incredible as I received this the very next day without the one-day delivery charge, I realize that this may not happen for everyone but I was dutifully impressed.

The best maps on the market. This saved our bacon on a tour of Route 66. There are gaps in the map where the fold lines appear, but they are hardly noticeable after a while.

Nice map, if you can read it. Way too small to be practical. Laminate is nice and quality is great, but, if you can't read it with a magnifying glass then it's pretty pointless. And this map requires a magnifying glass.

Exactly what I need for my road trip in case my GPS or phone can't get a connection. This situation came up last year, Great waterproof map. Exactly what I was looking for. But do yourself a favor, and buy a magnifying glass with your purchase. Everything is pretty small to the naked eye.
