This title from the Not for Parents travel series is a "training manual" for children wishing to become world explorers. Each of the first six chapters lets readers explore different biomes, from the thickest jungles to the deepest oceans. This includes the air—how would you like to learn to crash-land a plane? The final two chapters give navigation tips, survival rules, and warnings. Each glossy double-page spread is busy with illustrations and text: some spreads give short descriptive information about places, while others provide interesting historical bits about famous explorers, and still others give instructions for becoming an explorer. While not a “real” travel guide, the book is fun and educational, and it would engage and expand a child’s imagination. The editors offer a disclaimer at the end in case any facts are wrong, as well as an advisement that parental supervision is required. That won’t stop this from being frequently read. Grades 4-6. --J. B. Petty

"It's just one of those books that's written for kids that's so cool everyone should own a copy... Not only does this book give great exploration advice, but the safety tips are top-notch!" (Bring the Kids 2012-12-04)

Really awesome book! I bought this for my nature loving 6 yr old. He loves to read it together-although some of it is definitely for older kids so we skip over those parts. My husband-not a book lover by any means-even picked it up and looked through it. The whole time he kept saying he wished he had books like this one when he was a kid:)

We used this as part of a homeschool geography program, but my kids (especially my 11-yr old) keep reaching for it for non-school reading. Lots of different, short topics, so it can be picked up and enjoyed over and over, with big breaks in between.

I bought this book for my 10 year old nephew and my 8 year old son saw it and had to have it also. They both loved it. It's a very nice looking hardcover book with nice illustrations. A year later and my son still picks it up occasionally and reads through it. He gave it 5 stars, so I do too.

The information contained in How to be a World Explorer is excellent, and my grandson is enjoying it very much.

I wasn't expecting this to be a hard cover book. I missed that in the description, but was pleasantly surprised upon delivery. My 9 yo son just can't put this book down. He spent the entire day trying to tell me how he would wrestle an alligator, escape from quicksand, or protect himself from a grizzly attack. This book is WAY cool!!!

Great book with lots of interesting information. Our 11 year old loved it!

My son loves this book so much. The design and presentation of information ensures that the young reader will be fascinated by the facts needed to be a successful world explorer. Do you know how to put your eyeball back in it's socket should it pop out? My son does...

The book can educate, entertain and excite kids and adults alike. Many interesting facts and topics, spiced with history and good illustrations, teaching useful skills in the very attractive way.
