Customer Reviews

My name is Paula Hardy and I've been collecting my thoughts on the art of travelling well for over 20 years. I've lived in Africa, Europe and America where I've worked as a guidebook writer and travel editor for one of the world's leading travel publishers, &nbsp;Lonely Planet. I've written and produced over 30 guidebooks, alongside other assignments in print, film and radio, and all the while I've pondered the practicalities and philosophy behind creating great travel experiences. I set up &nbsp;Art of the Weekend &nbsp;in response to what I see as the increasing comodification of quality travel experiences. Its not the how, where and what of travel that makes it special. Like any creative endeavour it's the people you meet and the experiences you create. To that end travelling well is something of an art form. Safari njema.

Perfect. Practical. Beautiful design. Very easy to use.

easy, up to date, really pocket size, with everything you need for a city break in Milan!The writer can drive you behind the tourist scene of the city to taste local flavors and move like a resident...Suggested!

Excellent and up-to-date content, very user-friendly hypelink-navigation. Now, all it takes is having my iPad in my bag and I can find my way through a maze of possibilities, all within reach. A must.

I don't like the fact that everything I want to see/need to know is a link to somewhere else! Any of the written word in the book I have in older versions --- I don't want to link to hotels and eateries!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!
